This book series stems from a European university network of entrepreneurship researchers who annually arrange a conference for their entrepreneurship research groups and doctoral students (www.esu.fi). The mix between younger and more experienced researchers of this ESU community presents the most recent European entrepreneurship research in the combined workshop and conference, hence the articles in the book series represent this research front. It is characterized by great diversity and gives good promises for the future of European entrepreneurship research. This is also the aim for the book series: to share this diverse and interesting research with a larger audience.
