Contributors

Mark Beeson is Professor of International Politics in the Department of Political and International Studies at the University of Birmingham. His most recent publications include Securing Southeast Asia: The Politics of Security Sector Reform (with Alex Bellamy, Routledge, 2007), Regionalism, Globalization and East Asia: Politics, Security and Economic Development (Palgrave, 2007), and the edited volume, Bush and Asia: America's Evolving Relations with East Asia (Routledge, 2007). He is currently completing a new book for Routledge's 'Global Institutions' series, entitled Institutions of the Asia-Pacific: ASEAN, APEC and Beyond, to be published in 2008.

Christoph Bluth is Professor of International Studies at the School of Politics and International Studies, University of Leeds. His most recent publication is Korea published by Polity Press in the ‘Hotspots’ series in 2007. He was Visiting Professor at Yonsei University in Seoul in 2005 and Visiting Researcher at the Korea Institute for Defence Analyses. His major publications include The Two Germanies and Military Security in Europe (Palgrave, 2003), The Nuclear Challenge (Ashgate, 2001), Security Dilemmas in Russia and Eurasia (co-editor, Royal Institute of International Affairs, 1998) and The Collapse of Soviet Military Power (Ashgate, 1995). He is the author of numerous articles, book chapters and occasional papers on international security and advises the Honourable Dr Park Jin (Member of the National Assembly, Seoul) on Korean security issues. He is a frequent contributor to the Korea Herald and the Yorkshire Post. He edits the Euro-Asian Studies book series at Palgrave.

Shaun Breslin is Professor of Politics and International Studies at the University of Warwick, and co-editor of The Pacific Review. He is author of China in the 1980s: Centre-Province Relations in a Reforming Socialist State (Macmillan, 1996), Mao (Longman, 1998), China and the Global Political Economy (Palgrave, 2007), and co-author with Rod Hague and Martin Harrop of Comparative Government and Politics (Palgrave, 1998). He is also co-editor of two edited collections on comparative regionalism, and with Richard Higgott will publish a four-volume collection of readings on the international politics of the Asia-Pacific with Sage in 2008.
Christopher M. Dent is Reader in East Asia’s International Political Economy, Department of East Asian Studies, University of Leeds, UK. His published books include East Asian Regionalism (Routledge, 2008); New Free Trade Agreements in the Asia-Pacific (Palgrave Macmillan, 2006), Asia-Pacific Economic and Security Cooperation (editor, Palgrave Macmillan, 2003); The Foreign Economic Policies of Singapore, South Korea and Taiwan (Edward Elgar, 2002); Northeast Asian Regionalism: Learning from the European Experience (co-editor, RoutledgeCurzon, 2002); The European Union and East Asia: An Economic Relationship (Routledge, 1999); The European Economy: The Global Context (Routledge, 1997); Core Economics (co-editor, Heinemann, 1995). He is also author of around 50 academic articles and other papers. He has acted as a consultant advisor to the British and United States Governments, and European Commission on trade issues and is an Expert (Brains Trust) member of the Evian Group.

Joern Dosch is Professor of Asia-Pacific Studies at the Department of East Asian Studies, University of Leeds (UK). He was previously a Fulbright Scholar at the Asia/Pacific Research Centre (Stanford University) in California, Visiting Professor for International Relations at the University of Social Sciences (LUISS Guido Carli) in Rome, and Assistant Professor at the Institute of Political Science, University of Mainz, Germany. He spent long periods of time as a visiting scholar at several universities in Asia, at the East-West Center, Hawaii and Ohio University. Joern Dosch has published around 50 books and academic papers on international relations and Southeast Asian politics, including The Changing Dynamics of Southeast Asian Politics (Lynne Rienner, 2006).

Shintaro Hamanaka is Economic/International Affairs Advisor at the Permanent Mission of Japan to the World Trade Organization, Geneva. Prior to engaging with Japan’s Foreign Service, he served as an economist at the Bank of Japan. He is a specialist on theories of regional integration.
Christopher W. Hughes is Reader/Associate Professor, Department of Politics and International Studies, University of Warwick. He received his BA from Oxford University, and PhD from Sheffield University. He was formerly Research Fellow at Hiroshima University. He has been a Visiting Professor at the Faculty of Law, University of Tokyo (2000–2001), and the Asahi Shimbun Visiting Professor in Mass Media and Politics at the University of Tokyo (2006). He is the author of Japan’s Economic Power and Security: Japan and North Korea (Routledge, 1999) and Japan’s Security Agenda: Military, Economic and Environmental Dimensions (Lynne Rienner, 2004); Japan’s Re-emergence as a ‘Normal’ Military Power (OUP/IISS, 2004); co-author of Japan’s International Relations: Politics, Economics and Security (Routledge, 2001, revised edition 2005); and co-editor of New Regionalisms in the Global Political Economy (Routledge, 2002); The Globalisation of Political Violence: Globalisation’s Shadow (Routledge, 2007); and Regionalisation and Global Governance: The Taming of Globalisation (Routledge, 2007). He is joint editor of The Pacific Review.

Rex Li is Senior Lecturer in International Relations at Liverpool John Moores University. He lectures regularly at the Defence Academy of the United Kingdom. He has served as an associate editor of Security Dialogue (International Peace Research Institute, Oslo/Sage) and is a member of its editorial board. He has also been a commentator on security affairs for the BBC World Service. A frequent speaker at high-level conferences and meetings, he has published widely on Asia-Pacific security issues and China’s international relations. His articles have appeared in The Journal of Strategic Studies, Journal of Contemporary China, Pacifica Review, Asia-Pacific Business Review, The World Today, World Defence Systems and elsewhere. He is a contributor to a range of edited volumes, co-editor of two books and the author of A Rising China and Security in East Asia: Identity Construction and Security Discourse (Routledge, 2008).

Neil Renwick is Professor of Global Security at Coventry University. A doctoral graduate of the Australian National University, he was previously Professor of International Relations at Nottingham Trent University. He is the author of a number of books and journal articles including Northeast Asian Critical Security (Palgrave, 2004). He specializes in the security and international relations of East Asia from a human security perspective. He is a former book review editor for The Pacific Review and is a Council Member of the British Association of Chinese Studies.

Caroline Rose is Senior Lecturer in Japanese Studies in the Department of East Asian Studies at the University of Leeds. She received her BA and PhD at Leeds and has studied at Fudan University in Shanghai, China, and Tsukuba University in Japan. Her specialism is contemporary Sino-Japanese relations, with particular reference to the history problem and reconciliation. She has published two monographs on Sino-Japanese relations: Interpreting History in Sino-Japanese Relations (Routledge, 1998), Sino-Japanese Relations: Facing the Past, Looking to the Future? (RoutledgeCurzon, 2005). She has also published a number of book chapters and articles on Japanese history education, Chinese and Japanese nationalism, and Japanese diplomacy in the 1950s. Her current research focus is on reconciliation in Northeast Asia, the Yasukuni Shrine problem in Sino-Japanese relations, and Japanese diplomatic history of World War I and the inter-war period.

Steve Tsang is the Louis Cha Fellow and University Reader in Politics at St Anthony’s College, Oxford University, where he previously served as Dean of the College and Director of its Asian Studies Centre. In addition to his work on East Asia he also runs the Pluscarden Programme for the Study of Global Terrorism and Intelligence. He has published extensively on the history, politics and international relations of China, Taiwan and Hong Kong in academic journals, edited volumes, policy journals and international newspapers. His publications also include 13 books, the most recent of which are: Governing Hong Kong: Administrative Officers from the Nineteenth Century to the Handover to China, 1862–1997 (I.B. Tauris, 2007); Intelligence and Human Rights in the Era of Global Terrorism (ed.) (Praeger, 2007); The Cold War’s Odd Couple: The Unintended Partnership between the Republic of China and the United Kingdom, 1950–1958 (I.B. Tauris, 2006); and If China Attacks Taiwan: Military Strategy, Politics and Economics (ed.) (Routledge, 2006). He is currently working on a biography of Chiang Kai-shek.