

Acknowledgements

Many people have contributed to the completion of this three-year book with their academic and human prowess. It is impossible to thank everyone who has offered such much-valued support, but a few names should, however, be mentioned.

I owe gratitude to Herbert Hovenkamp whose inspiring guidance led to the birth of this book. I am deeply indebted to Steven Anderman, who constantly improved my reasoning and the overall text through his critical and provoking observations. I am beholden to Federico Ghezzi – my ‘chief’ – who was the first to show me that antitrust law represents a theoretical and practical challenge for lawyers, economists and policy makers. Special thanks go to Chiara Battistini, Elisa Brodi, Paola Magnani, Maria Lillà Montagnani, and Federico Morando for their precious comments, lively discussion and the reassurance they gave me when subjected, often involuntarily (!), to my long monologues on the topic of this book. I am very grateful to Nina Segre for giving her valuable time in reading and patiently reviewing the drafts. And, on a personal note, I thank my parents and friends for warmly supporting my efforts.
