So here it is at last. . . the beginnings.

I would like to thank everyone involved who got us to this point. There is a huge team of people, many of whom are invisible to the majority of us.

Many thanks go to the editing team at Edward Elgar who have all shown considerable and above-load patience with this work. In particular, thanks to Edward Elgar himself, Francine O'Sullivan, Jennifer Wilcox, Elizabeth Clack and Cathrin Vaughan. I hope it exceeds your expectations and motivates you to continue working with us.

Thanks also to all those who have contributed chapters. I realise that I chased some of you and some of you chased me. I am grateful for your insight and learning. I think your work is rich with wisdom and will shine brightly in the field.

Thank you also to the people working in the field who inspire us to build our research, teaching and outreach programs. If our research can support your efforts we will have played a small part in your success.

Also, and on behalf of the contributors – thank you to all our colleagues, friends and family who continue to support and help us.

Finally, thanks to you the reader who will utilize and build upon this work in practice.
