

Contents

---

List of figures	vii
List of tables	viii
List of contributors	ix

1 Coordination between inertia and dynamic development: an overview of issues and contributions Werner Pascha, Cornelia Storz and Markus Taube	1
--	---

PART I INSTITUTIONAL CHANGE AND INERTIA

2 Adaptive efficiency and pragmatic flexibility: characteristics of institutional change in capitalism, Chinese-style Joachim Ahrens and Patrick Jünemann	23
3 Tracing the process of property rights specification in China: the case of New Technology Enterprises Marcus Conlé	50
4 Institutional change and the role of government: technology policy in Japan and Korea Tim Goydke	73
5 Higher education reform in South Korea and the transformation of university governance Peter Mayer	97
6 Institutions and organizations in Korea's upstream innovation governance: a search for adaptive efficiency? Dominik F. Schlossstein	115

PART II PATTERNS OF COORDINATION

7 The current state of research on networks in China's business system Johannes Meuer and Barbara Krug	145
8 A different capitalism for China? The role of guanxi and the family for Chinese economic development Susanne Rühle	168

9	Patterns of distinctive institutional change in Chinese capitalism Tobias ten Brink	200
10	Japan's silver market: creating a new industry under uncertainty Cornelia Storz and Werner Pascha	222
11	The role of institutional conditions in Japanese FDI in European transition economies Norifumi Kawai	268
	Index	301