Contributors

Elaine Acosta  Elaine is a sociologist from the University of Havana, Cuba. She holds an MA in Latin American Studies from the Alberto Hurtado University in Chile and a doctorate in International and Intercultural Studies from the University of Deusto, Bilbao, Spain. Her research interests range from care work and international female migrations – including rights, citizenship and gender – to female labour market issues and, recently, transnational family networks. Currently, she collaborates with the International Migration Research Unit at the University of Deusto and also works in the Department of Sociology at Alberto Hurtado University.

James D. Bachmeier  James is Assistant Professor in the Department of Sociology at Temple University, Philadelphia, USA. His research focuses on Mexican migration to the United States, the sociology of immigrant incorporation in the United States and Europe, and the dynamics of immigration and health.

Lourdes Benería  Lourdes is Professor Emerita at Cornell University and is associated with IIEDG, Barcelona. An economist, her work on gender and international development began in 1977–79, as coordinator of the Program on Rural Women at the International Labour Office in Geneva. Since then, she has continued to be involved with projects at UN-related and other international institutions. She is the author of Gender, Development and Globalization (Routledge, 2003), and other authored or edited books such as the three-volume Feminist Economics for the 21st Century, with Ann Mari May and Diana Strassmann, Edward Elgar Economics Series. She is a former president of the International Association for Feminist Economics (IAFFE), an associate editor of Feminist Economics and the European Journal of Development Research, and a member of the editorial board of Economia Critica.

Caroline H. Bledsoe  Caroline was awarded a doctorate in Anthropology by Stanford University and is currently the Herskovits Professor of African Studies and Anthropology at Northwestern University in Evanston (Illinois, USA). Her research topics include cultural visions of reproduction and conjugal union in West Africa, as well as among Africans in Spain and, for comparison, in the US. Specific themes have been: marriage, contraception, ageing, child fostering and education. A more recent project has concerned the development of obstetrics in the US.

Pilar Campoy-Muñoz  Pilar received a BA in Business Administration in 2005 and an MA in Research Methods on Economics and Business Sciences in 2011, both from the University of Córdoba, Spain. She is currently pursuing a doctorate and working as a researcher in the Department of Economics of Loyola University, Andalucía, Spain. Her current research interests include labour migrations, gender differences and computational economics.

Irina Casado i Aijón  Irina is Lecturer in Anthropology at the Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona. She is also a member of GRAFO (Fundamental and Oriented Anthropology Research Group) and GETP (Study Group of Cross-cultural Kinship). She has done fieldwork in Oslo (Norway), focusing her research on motherhood, fatherhood and the socio-cultural organization of childcare and upbringing. She completed research in the Àneu Valleys (Catalonian Pyrenees) on kinship organization and domestic structures as well as the construction processes of individual and collective identities that arise from societies in a high mountain landscape. She has been carrying out fieldwork with the Amazigh Rif immigrant population in Catalonia since 2006, focusing on medical pluralism and the construction of therapeutic itineraries, paying special attention to sexual, reproductive and paediatric health.

Christine Catarino  Christine holds a PhD in Sociology from the University of Paris I Panthéon-Sorbonne, and is an associate member of the Institut des Sciences sociales du Politique – Université Paris Ouest – Nanterre La Défense. Her areas of investigation include migration studies and intersectionality. She has worked as a contractual researcher on two European projects looking at the integration of ethnic entrepreneurs’ families and female migrants. Among her recent publications are ‘Family matters: migrant domestic and care work and the issue of recognition’, with Maria Kontos and Kyoko Shinozaki, in F. Anthias, M. Kontos and M. Morokvasic-Müller (eds), Female Migrants in Europe: The Paradoxes of Integration (Springer, 2013, pp. 133–52) and ‘Politiques migratoires et politiques d’emploi: la flexibilité sexuée en Europe’, Cahiers du Genre, 51, December, 2011, 93–112.

Sylvia Chant  Sylvia is Professor of Development Geography at the London School of Economics and Political Science, UK, where she is Director of the MSc in Urbanisation and Development. She was elected as a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts (FRSA) in 2011 on the grounds of her ‘expertise and exploration of gender in geographical development’, and she has conducted
contributors

Research in Mexico, Costa Rica, the Philippines and The Gambia. Her main interests are in gender and poverty, female employment and urban labour markets, rural–urban migration, housing and female-headed households. Author of over a dozen books, her latest titles include Gender, Generation and Poverty: Exploring the Feminisation of Poverty in Africa, Asia and Latin America (Edward Elgar, 2007), and The International Handbook of Gender and Poverty: Concepts, Research, Policy (Edward Elgar, 2010).

Anastasia Christou  Anastasia is Reader in Sociology, Middlesex University, UK. She has previously been Senior Lecturer in Cultural Geography, University of Sussex; Visiting Assistant Professor, University of Aalborg; Postdoctoral Researcher at the Academy for Migration Studies in Denmark, and Visiting Research Fellow at the Wissenschaftszentrum Berlin für Sozialforschung in Germany. She has conducted multi-sited, multi-method and comparative ethnographic research in the United States, Germany, Denmark, Greece and Cyprus and has published widely on issues of diasporas; migration/return migration; the second generation and ethnicity; space and place; transnationalism and identity; culture and memory; gender and feminism; home and belonging; and emotion and narrativity.

Anna Cieslik  Anna is an Assistant Professor at New Jersey City University and a research fellow at Max Planck Institute for the Study of Religious and Ethnic Diversity. She is an urban geographer with an interest in gender, immigration and diversity in urban contexts. She received her doctorate from Clark University (2011) where she worked on Polish migration to London and migrants’ perceptions of urban environments. Her current research investigates the social and spatial patterns that arise under conditions of superdiversity in Astoria, NY and is part of the GlobalDiverscities project, funded by the European Research Council, which compares superdiverse neighbourhoods in Singapore, Johannesburg and New York City.

Almudena Cortés  Almudena is Lecturer in Social Anthropology at the Complutense University in Madrid (Spain). In 2010, she was awarded a doctorate with honours in Social Anthropology (Autonomous University of Madrid). She has been Visiting Scholar at the Danish Institute for International Studies, FLACSO-Ecuador and the Latin American Studies Institute (Freie Universität, Berlin). Her fieldwork focuses on ‘migration’, development and governance migration patterns, consisting of values, standards and cultural representations of migration and based on multi-sited, transnational work in different places in Ecuador and Spain from 2004 to 2009. She has published her research findings nationally and internationally in a wide range of prestigious, peer-reviewed journals, as well as individual and collective books.

Hein de Haas Hein is co-director of the International Migration Institute at the University of Oxford and Lecturer in Migration Studies. His research focuses on the links between migration and broader development processes, primarily from the perspective of migrant-sending societies. He did extensive fieldwork in the Middle East and North Africa and, particularly, Morocco. He has published on a wide range of issues including migration theory, migration and development, remittances and transnationalism, migration determinants and policies. He has regularly acted as consultant or adviser to national governments and international organizations including UNDP, UNRISD, IOM and the EU.

Carmen Diana Deere Carmen is Distinguished Professor of Latin American Studies and Food and Resource Economics at the University of Florida and former director of the UF Center for Latin American Studies. She holds a doctorate in Agricultural Economics from the University of California, Berkeley. She is a past president of the Latin American Studies Association (LASA) and an associate editor of Feminist Economics. She is the co-author (with Magdalena León) of Empowering Women: Land and Property Rights in Latin America (University of Pittsburgh Press, 2001), winner of LASA’s Bryce Wood Book Award, and co-editor of special issues of Feminist Economics on gender and international migration and on women and wealth.

Florence Degavre Florence is a socio-economist, researcher at the Centre Interdisciplinaire de Recherches Travail, Etat et Société, and an Assistant Professor at the Catholic University of Louvain, Belgium. Her main research interest is social policy, in particular, marketization and defamilialization in European care regimes. She studies elderly care from a Polanyian and feminist perspective. She also conducts research on gender and social enterprise.

Tineke Fokkema Tineke is a Senior Researcher at the Netherlands Interdisciplinary Demographic Institute in The Hague. Her research interests include the determinants of remittances and immigrant integration, gender and generational dynamics of migration, the contested links between integration and transnationalism, return migration and the reintegration of returnees into society and their extended families.

Carlos R. García-Alonso Carlos received his BSc in Engineering in 1985 and doctorate in Agricultural Engineering in 1988, both from the Polytechnic University of Madrid. He is currently Operations Research and Information Systems Professor in the Department of Quantitative Methods at Loyola University in Andalucía, Spain. His current research interests include operational research (simulation and data envelopment analysis), artificial intelligence (fuzzy logic and evolutionary algorithms), and information systems in order to design simulation-based and artificial intelligence-based models in economics.

Pierrette Hondagneu-Sotelo Pierrette is Professor in the Department of Sociology at the University of Southern California. She is the author or editor of eight books, the most recent of which are God’s Heart Has No Borders: How Religious Activists are Working for Immigrant Rights (University of California Press, 2008), Nation and Migration, Past and Future, co-edited with David Gutierrez (Johns Hopkins University Press, 2009), and Domestica: Trabajadoras Inmigrantes a Cargo de la Limpieza y el Cuidado a la Sombra de la Abundancia (Mexico: Porrúa Editorial, 2011). She is currently writing a book about migration and transformations of garden landscapes.

Naila Kabeer Naila is Professor of Gender and Development at the Gender Institute, London School of Economics and Political Science, University of London, UK. She is a social economist working on the social and economic interactions between households, communities and the wider economy. Areas of specialization include: poverty, social exclusion and gender in relation to labour markets and livelihood strategies in the context of globalisation. Her main areas of research have been in South and Southeast Asia. She has been active in developing frameworks and methodologies for integrating gender concerns into policy and planning and, recently, has been working with the UN Division for the Advancement for Women (DAW) as the lead author on ‘The World Survey on Women and Development, 2009’.

Laurence Lessard-Phillips Laurence is a research associate at the Institute for Social Change, University of Manchester (UK). Her research focuses on the dimensionality of immigrant adaptation from a comparative perspective; the academic, policy and public perspectives of immigration adaptation; ethnic inequalities in education and the labour market; the cumulative dynamics of international migration and their effect; and the impact of immigration and diversity on social cohesion.

Diana Mata-Codesal Diana is a postdoctoral researcher at UNAM, Mexico and at the University of Deusto, Spain. She holds a doctorate in Migration Studies from the University of Sussex, UK. She has a multidisciplinary background (BA in Economics and Anthropology) and research experience in mobility-related issues. She is interested in Latin American migrations to Europe and the US. She has carried out research on the food practices of Ecuadorian migrants abroad and on social and material remittances in rural Highland Ecuador.

Pau Miret-Gamundi  Pau is a researcher at the Centre for Demographic Studies (CED) at the Autonomous University of Barcelona (UAB). He obtained a BSc in Sociology at UAB in 1989, a post-graduate diploma in Demography at CED in 1991, and a PhD in Sociology from Spain’s Universidad Nacional de Educación a Distancia. He has worked in the Cathie Marsh Centre for Census and Survey Research (Manchester, UK) and in the Department of Social Statistics at the University of Southampton (UK). He was a Ramón y Cajal Fellow from 2005 to 2009 at the UAB’s Department of Geography. His main areas of study are the effects of education and migration on family formation and labour force participation.

Mirjana Morokvasic  Mirjana is a Research Director and Professor Emeritus at the Centre national de la Recherche Scientifique, Paris. She has taught at universities in France – including the Lille University and Paris X–Nanterre University – and abroad, as the Marie Jahoda Professor at the Ruhr Universität Bochum, Germany, and as Guest Professor at the Institute for Gender Studies, Ochanomizu University, Tokyo. Her research focuses on migration, identity processes, transnationalism and gender, and privileges a comparative perspective. Her numerous publications are in several languages and her latest book, co-edited with Floya Anthias and Maria Kontos, is Paradoxes of Integration: Female Migrants in Europe (Springer, 2013).

Laura Oso  Laura holds doctoral degrees in Sociology from the University of La Sorbonne (2002) and the University of A Coruña (1997). She is currently Senior Lecturer at the Faculty of Sociology at the University of A Coruña, where she coordinates ESOMI (Research Group on the Sociology of International Migrations). She has worked as a consultant for various international organizations, including the OECD and the European Union. Her research has focused mainly on gender and migration and the insertion of immigrant populations in labour markets, covering domestic service, prostitution and ethnic entrepreneurship. In recent years she has coordinated the Research Projects ‘The Impact of Migration on Development: Gender and Transnationalism’ (SEJ2007/6379) (2007–10) and ‘Gender, Transnationalism and Inter-Generational Strategies for Social Mobility’ (FEM2011-26210) (2011–2014) from the Ministerio de Economía y Competitividad, Spain. Her numerous publications include: ‘From sex to gender: the feminisation of migration and labour-market

Sònia Parella  Sònia is Associate Professor in the Department of Sociology at the Autonomous University of Barcelona. She holds a PhD in Sociology from the UAB (2002). She is a Senior Researcher at the GEDIME (Centre for Immigration and Ethnic Minorities Studies) at the UAB. Her primary research interests and publications focus on gender, migration and domestic work; ethnic entrepreneurship; transnational families and cross-border social practices. Most of these studies involve Latin American groups in Spain.

Natalia Ribas-Mateos  Natalia holds a BA from the Complutense University of Madrid in 1988, and a doctorate from the Autonomous University of Barcelona, where she conducted research and taught in the Sociology Department until 2001. In 2001 she obtained a Marie Curie Fellowship at the University of Sussex and then a second Marie Curie Fellowship at the CNRS, Aix-en-Provence. She is now a Ramón Cajal Fellow at ESOMI (Research Group on the Sociology of International Migrations, University of A Coruña). She has six single-authored books, one of them published in the United States in 2005, entitled The Mediterranean in the Age of Globalization: Migration, Welfare and Borders (New Brunswick, NJ: Transaction).

Anna Safuta  Anna is Research Fellow of the Belgian National Fund for Scientific Research (FNRS) and a PhD student at the Catholic University of Louvain-la-Neuve (UCL) in Belgium. Her doctorate is a study of domestic services as performed by first-generation migrants in Belgium and Poland, in particular, home-based elderly care. Previously a researcher at the European Social Observatory in Brussels (OSE), Anna has authored publications on social and health policy in Europe. Her current research interests include social policy, migration and gendered approaches of theory and methodology in the social sciences.

Amelia Sáiz López  Amelia is a sociologist and Lecturer in East Asian Studies at the Autonomous University of Barcelona. She is also co-director of the Red de Investigaciones sobre Comunidades Asiáticas en España (RICAEE) at the Cidob Foundation in Barcelona. Over the last decade she has completed many research projects on gender and East Asian migration in Spain and in East Asian Women Studies. Her major publications include Utopía y género: Las mujeres chinas en el siglo XX (Barcelona: Edicions Bellaterra, 2001); Mujeres asiáticas: cambio social y modernidad (Barcelona: CIDOB, 2006); and Empresariado asiático en España (Barcelona: CIDOB, 2009). She has also published book chapters and articles such as ‘Transnationalism, motherhood, and entrepreneurship: Chinese women in Spain’, in M.T. Segal, E.N. Chow and V. Demos (eds), Social Production and Reproduction at the Interface of Public and Private Spheres (Bingley, UK: Emerald, 2012).

Melania Salazar-Ordóñez
Melania received an MA in Regional Development in 2007 and her doctorate in Economic Science and Business Administration in 2009, both from the University of Seville, Spain. She is currently an applied economics researcher at the Department of Economics, Loyola University, Andalucía, Spain. Her current research interests include labour migrations, labour market and computational economics.

María Luisa Setién
María Luisa is Lecturer in Sociology at the University of Deusto, Bilbao, Spain. She is also director of the Research Team on Social and Cultural Challenges of a World in Transformation. Her main research areas focus on international migrations, inter-ethnic relations, social welfare and values.

Papa Sow
Papa gained his doctorate in Human Geography from the Autonomous University of Barcelona. He is a former Marie Curie Fellowship holder at the University of Warwick, and is currently a senior researcher in the Cultural and Social Change Department at the Centre for Development Research (ZEF) at the University of Bonn, Germany. His research has concerned the international migration of Senegalese and Gambians to Spain and France. He has studied the connections that immigrants strike up, through family, trade and communication technologies; and the socioeconomic, environmental and demographic changes that continue to unfold in the post-colonial era, both within and between Africa and Europe.

Verena Stolcke
Verena is Professor Emeritus of Social Anthropology at the Autonomous University of Barcelona. Born in Germany in 1938, she was educated at Oxford University (DPhil, 1970). She conducted field and archival research in Cuba in 1967–68 and in São Paulo, Brazil between 1973 and 1979, while she taught at the Universidade Estadual de Campinas. She is the author of Marriage, Class, and Colour in Nineteenth-Century Cuba (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1974, reprinted by the University of Michigan Press in 1989 and 2003). Her research in

Christine Verschuur Christine is an anthropologist and was awarded a PhD in Socioeconomic Development by the Paris I–Sorbonne University in 1983. She is a Senior Lecturer at the Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies in Geneva where she is also Director of the Gender and Development Programme. She is also Director of the Cahiers Genre et Développement collection for L’Harmattan, Paris. Her areas of focus are gender and development, decolonial feminist studies, urban popular movements, migration, rural development and peasant organizations. Recent publications include: ‘Raccommodages de la pauvreté ou engagements féministes dans les quartiers populaires de San Cayetano et Gamboa en Amérique latine’, Autrepart (61), 2012, 175–90, and ‘Féminismes décoloniaux, genre et développement’, Revue Tiers Monde (209), 2012, with B. Destremau.

Elena Vidal-Coso Elena is a Post-doctoral Research Fellow at the Socio-Demography Group in the Department of Political and Social Sciences of the Pompeu Fabra University in Barcelona. She obtained her PhD in Demography from the Autonomous University of Barcelona in 2009 on the subject of ‘Labour and Socio-demographic complementarity between immigrant and non-immigrant women in Spain’. From 2004 to 2010 she worked at the Centre for Demographic Studies (CED) as a researcher on several projects about female labour supply, on the dilemmas of reconciling family and work, and on the impact of international migration on the Spanish labour market. Her current research interests are the dynamics of labour supply and integration in the employment structure of female immigrants, and the intra-household specialization of immigrant families.