
Contributors

Heidrun Åm is a Researcher at the Centre for Technology and Society, Department of Interdisciplinary Studies of Culture, NTNU in Trondheim, Norway. Heidrun is interested in the governance of new and emerging technologies and in the sociomaterial production of evidence for policy-making. She has looked at themes such as nanotechnology, integrated research, and responsible research and innovation (RRI). Her analysis combines poststructuralist policy analysis and Science and Technology Studies (STS).

Mani R. Banjade is Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the Center for International Forestry Research (CIFOR). His current research engagement is on emergence, processes and outcomes of land and forest tenure reforms in developing countries across Latin America, Africa and Asia. His research interests include deliberative governance, community forestry and multi-level governance.

Marlon Barbehön is a Research Fellow at the Institute of Political Science at Heidelberg University, Germany. His current work focuses on discourse-analytical approaches within urban studies and welfare state research.

Kathrin Braun is Professor for Comparative Politics and Policy Analysis at the University of Vienna, Austria. Her main research areas are science and technology policy, governance and biomedicine, biopolitics and politics of historic justice and memory.

Vincent Dubois is Professor of Sociology and Political Science at the University of Strasbourg, France, where he is a member at the SAGE research unit and at the Institute for Advanced Study. His research fields include cultural policy and social welfare.

Anna Durnová is Hertha-Firnberg Assistant Professor at the Department of Political Science at the University of Vienna, Austria. She researches the role of emotions in policy process using examples from health care policies. She is also Book Review Editor of Critical Policy Studies.

Laureen Elgert is Assistant Professor of International Development and Environmental Politics at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Massachusetts, USA. Her research involves the politics of expertise, evidence and metrics of sustainability and how critical analysis can contribute to improving deliberative environmental policy. Laureen's geographical interests include Latin America and, more recently, China.

Selen A. Ercan is a Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the Institute for Governance and Policy Analysis, University of Canberra, Australia. She works in the area of deliberative democracy focusing particularly on the capacity of this approach in addressing irreconcilable value conflicts in contemporary democracies. Aside from the theory and practice of deliberative democracy, Selen's current research interests include alternative forms of political participation, protest movements and interpretivist approaches to policy analysis.

Susan S. Fainstein is a Senior Research Fellow in the Department of Urban Planning and Design at the Harvard University Graduate School of Design, where she was a professor until 2012. She is also a Visiting Professor at the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy of the National University of Singapore. She previously taught at Columbia and Rutgers universities. She is a recipient of the Distinguished Educator Award for lifetime contributions and of the Davidoff Award for her book The Just City, both from the Association of Collegiate Schools of Planning (ACSP). She is the co-author of Restructuring the City (Longman) and Urban Political Movements (Prentice Hall) and has edited books on gender and planning, urban tourism, urban theory and planning theory. Her areas of research are comparative public policy, urban redevelopment and planning theory.

Frank Fischer is Senior Research Associate at the Environmental Policy Research Centre at the Free University of Berlin, Germany and Rutgers University, New Jersey, USA. His most recent publications include Democracy and Expertise: Reorienting Policy Inquiry (Oxford) and The Argumentative Turn Revisited: Public Policy as Communicative Practice (Duke University Press), co-edited with Herbert Gottweis. Currently he is completing Climate Change and the Democratic Prospect (Oxford). He is also co-editor of the journal of Critical Policy Studies (Routledge).

Steven Griggs is Professor of Public Policy at De Montfort University, UK. His research interests are in political discourse theory and its contribution to our understanding of policy-making. He has recently published The Politics of Airport Expansion in the UK (Manchester University Press) (with David Howarth) and the edited collection, Practices of Freedom (Cambridge University Press) (with Aletta J. Norval and Hendrik Wagenaar).

David Howarth is Professor in Social and Political Theory at the University of Essex, UK. His research interests are in poststructuralist theories of society, politics and policy-making. His publications include Discourse (Open University Press), Logics of Critical Explanation in Social and Political Theory (Routledge) (with Jason Glynos) and The Politics of Airport Expansion in the UK (Manchester University Press) (with Steven Griggs). He has recently published the research monograph Poststructuralism and After (Palgrave Macmillan).

Helen Ingram is a Research Fellow at the Southwest Center, University of Arizona, USA. She previously retired from the University of California at Irvine. In addition to her much cited work with Anne Schneider continued in the chapter included in this volume, she has written widely in both public policy and water policy. She is a co-author of the book The Power of Narratives in Environmental Networks (The MIT Press, 2013).

Bob Jessop is Distinguished Professor of Sociology and Co-Director of the Cultural Political Economy Research Centre at Lancaster University, UK. He developed the strategic-relational approach in the social sciences and is well known for his contributions to state theory, critical political economy and, most recently, cultural political economy. His most recent book is The State: Past, Present, Future (Polity, 2015).

Wolfram Lamping is an Associate Professor at the Technische Universität Darmstadt, Germany. He works on comparative public policy, policy analysis and political systems in a comparative perspective.

Raul P. Lejano is Associate Professor of Environmental Education at New York University, USA and conducts research on relational approaches to environmental policy and institutions. He is the author of Frameworks for Policy Analysis: Merging Text and Context (Routledge) and is co-author of The Power of Narrative in Environmental Networks (The MIT Press).

Eva Lövbrand is Associate Professor at the Department of Thematic Studies: Environmental Change at Linköping University, Sweden. Much of Eva's work has focused on the ideas, knowledge claims and expert practices that inform environmental politics and policy-making. She is also co-editor of the forthcoming Research Handbook on Climate Governance (Edward Elgar Publishing, 2015).

Timothy W. Luke is University Distinguished Professor of Political Science at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in Blacksburg, Virginia, USA. He also serves as the Program Chair for Government and International Affairs in the School of Public and International Affairs, and founded the Alliance for Social, Political, Ethical, and Social Theory (ASPECT) doctoral program in the College of Liberal Arts and Human Sciences at Virginia Tech.

Ricardo Fabrino Mendonça is Assistant Professor in the Department of Political Science, Federal University of Minas Gerais, Brazil and one of the coordinators of the Research Group on Democracy and Justice (Margem). He works on democratic theory, critical theory, social movements and political communication. Some of his recent publications have appeared in Policy Studies; Constellations; Political Studies; Policy & Society; Critical Policy Studies; and Brazilian Political Science Review.

Sybillie Münch is Assistant Professor of Theory of Public Policy at the Center for the Study of Democracy at Leuphana University Lüneburg, Germany. Her research focuses on interpretive approaches to policy analysis as well as urban and migration research.

Hemant R. Ojha is currently a Research Fellow at the School of Social Sciences at UNSW, Australia. He is also a Senior Fellow (honorary) at the University of Melbourne. For more than 15 years he has worked in Nepal on critical action research and policy analysis in forestry, natural resource management and rural development. He is a founder of ForestAction Nepal (2000) for which he served as the Executive Coordinator and the Chair of the board. He is also the founding Chair of the Southasia Institute of Advanced Studies (2011) based in Nepal.

Michael Orsini is Full Professor in the School of Political Studies and currently Director of the Institute of Feminist and Gender Studies at the University of Ottawa, Canada. He is the co-editor of Critical Policy Studies (University of British Columbia Press, 2007) and Worlds of Autism: Across the Spectrum of Neurological Difference (University of Minnesota Press, 2013).

Sung Jin Park is a Senior Consultant in Samsung SDS's Smart Town Consulting Group, Seoul, Republic of Korea. She has a PhD in urban and regional planning, and her work has focused on the relationship between implementation and so-called middle-level bureaucrats. Related to this is much work conducted by her on the digital empowerment of rural communities.

Stephanie Paterson is an Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science at Concordia University in Montreal, Canada. Her research interests include gender and public policy, feminist policy analysis and reproductive politics.

Dieter Plehwe, PhD, political scientist, works as Senior Fellow at the Social Policy and Inequality Department of the Berlin Social Science Research Centre, Germany. He is best known for his work on think-tanks, transnational expertise, consulting and lobby/advocacy networks and the history and transformation of neoliberalism.

Thomas Saretzki is Professor of Political Theory and Public Policy at the Institute of Political Science and head of the research area on participation and public policy at the Center for the Study of Democracy, Leuphana University of Lüneburg, Germany.

Francesca Scala is an Associate Professor of Political Science at Concordia University in Montreal, Canada. Her research focuses on issues related to gender, policy analysis and the politics of knowledge and expertise.

Vivien A. Schmidt is Jean Monnet Professor of European Integration, Professor of International Relations in the Frederick S. Pardee School of Global Studies and Professor of Political Science at Boston University, where she is also Founding Director of BU's Center for the Study of Europe. Her recent books include Resilient Liberalism in Europe's Political Economy (co-edited, Cambridge, 2013), Debating Political Identity and Legitimacy in the European Union (co-edited, Routledge, 2011), Democracy in Europe (Oxford, 2006) and The Futures of European Capitalism (Oxford, 2002). She is currently working on a book entitled Discursive Institutionalism: Ideas and Discourse in Political Analysis (Oxford, forthcoming).

Anne L. Schneider has had a long-time interest in the question of how public policy can (should) serve democracy but so often fails to do so. She and her colleague Helen Ingram are the authors of Policy Design for Democracy (University of Kansas Press) and Deserving and Entitled: Social Constructions and Public Policy (SUNY Press). She is now retired but active in tracking legislation and advocating for socially just public policy in Arizona.

Krishna K. Shrestha is Senior Lecturer in Development Studies at the University of New South Wales, Australia. His core research interest encompasses political ecology, climate change adaptation, development studies and urban planning, and in particular the intersection of the four with the work on environmental and climate justice in Nepal, India and Australia.

Holger Strassheim is Assistant Professor at the Humboldt-University of Berlin and guest researcher at the Berlin Social Science Center, Germany. His publications include works on public policy and governance, expertise and evidence-based policy, welfare change, consumer policy and behavioural economics.

Johannes Stripple is Associate Professor in Political Science, Lund University, Sweden. He explores and develops critical climate studies at the intersection between critical political theory and emerging practices of a rapidly warming and carbon constrained world. Johannes has recently edited (with Harriet Bulkeley) Governing the Climate: New Approaches to Rationality, Power and Politics (Cambridge University Press, 2014).

Ngai-Ling Sum is Reader in Cultural Political Economy and Co-director of the Cultural Political Economy Research Centre at Lancaster University, UK. She has made pioneering theoretical contributions to cultural political economy and applied these to China/Hong Kong and East Asia more generally. She is the senior author, with Bob Jessop, of Towards a Cultural Political Economy: Putting Culture in its Place in Political Economy (Edward Elgar Publishing, 2013).

Douglas Torgerson is Professor Emeritus of Politics at Trent University in Canada. A past Editor of Policy Sciences and a current Forum Editor for Critical Policy Studies, he focuses his work on theoretical aspects of policy studies and environmentalism.

Hendrik Wagenaar is Professor in the Department of Urban Studies and Planning and Associate Director of the Crick Centre for Understanding Politics at the University of Sheffield, UK. He is author of Meaning in Action: Interpretation and Dialogue in Policy Analysis (M.E. Sharpe, 2011) and co-editor of Practices of Freedom: Decentered Governance, Conflict and Democratic Participation (Cambridge University Press, 2014).

Dvora Yanow is Guest Professor in Wageningen University's Department of Social Sciences, Communication, Philosophy and Technology Sub-Department, the Netherlands. Her research/teaching explores the generation and communication of knowing and meaning in organizational and policy settings. Her most recent book, Interpretive Research Design: Concepts and Processes, written with Peregrine Schwartz-Shea, is the first volume in their co-edited Routledge Series on Interpretive Methods; their co-edited Interpretation and Method: Empirical Research Methods and the Interpretive Turn (M.E. Sharpe) is now out in a second edition.

In memory of Herbert Gottweis, 1958–2014

