

Contributors

Åke E. Andersson is Professor of Economics at Jönköping International Business School, Sweden. His research interests are oriented towards programming models of regional and industrial models. He has also focused on theories and models of regional and industrial economic growth and the role of infrastructure in the regional and urban economies.

David E. Andersson is Assistant Professor of Economics in the School of Entrepreneurship and Management at Shanghai Tech University, China. His research profile is economics of IPR, markets for technology, innovation and technological change and patents and inventive activity.

Staffan Andersson is Associate Professor of Political Science at Linnaeus University, Sweden. His research mainly concerns the functioning of democracy, how power is organized, why institutions work well or badly and the integrity of public administration.

Per Assmo is Associate Professor of Human & Economic Geography at University West, Sweden. His research interests include regional geography, rural development, local economic development and political ecology with a focus on both Sweden and Africa.

Caroline Berggren is Associate Professor of Education at Gothenburg University, Sweden. Her general research interest is social division based on class and gender with specific focus on the structure of education and the labour market in Sweden.

Marie-Louise von Bergmann-Winberg is Professor of Political Science at Mid Sweden University. She has conducted research on social and political entrepreneurship, multilevel governance, regionalization and regional reforms in Sweden and plural economy and socioeconomic regulation.

Tobias Bromander is lecturer in Political Science at Linnaeus University, Sweden. His research interests include higher education and entrepreneurship, media, Swedish politics and the European Union and politics and gender perspectives on media and political scandals.

Yvonne von Friedrichs is Professor of Business Administration at Mid Sweden University. Her research includes societal entrepreneurship, community entrepreneurship, local and regional development and women's entrepreneurship.

Charlie Karlsson is Professor Emeritus of the Economics of Technological Change at Jönköping International Business School and Professor of Industrial Economics at Blekinge Institute of Technology, Sweden. In his research, Charlie Karlsson has focused on infrastructure economics, urban economics, the economics of technological change, regional economics, spatial industrial dynamics, entrepreneurship and small business economics, and the economics of R&D and higher education.

Martin Nilsson is Senior Lecturer of Political Science at Linnaeus University, Sweden. His research focuses on politics and higher education, European politics, the European Union and prerequisites to democracy, including political elite theories on democratic change.

Charlotte Silander is Senior Lecturer of Political Science at Linnaeus University, Sweden. She works at the Center for Educational Development in Higher Education at Linnaeus University. Her research focuses on European Union educational policy, gender equality in higher education, systems of higher education and university research policies.

Daniel Silander is Associate Professor of Political Science at Linnaeus University, Sweden. His main areas of interests are political entrepreneurship on a domestic and international level, international politics, democracy and state and human security.

Per Strömblad is Associate Professor of Political Science at Linnaeus University, Sweden. He has conducted research on citizenship, integration and political participation with focus on immigrants' democratic influence in Swedish society.

Elin Wihlborg is Professor of Political Science and Public Administration at Linköping University, Sweden. Her research interests focus on theoretical and empirical analysis of regional and local public policy issues and public administration, especially regarding policies in the information society and sustainable development issues.