

Contributors

David Bailey is Professor of Industrial Strategy at Aston Business School, has written extensively on industrial and regional policy – especially in relation to manufacturing and the auto industry – and is a regular newspaper columnist and media commentator.

Dr Gill Bentley lectures on Urban and Regional Economic Development at Birmingham Business School, specialising in industrial and regional development, policy and governance at different spatial scales. She has published widely on local and regional economic development, including writing about the restructuring of the European auto industry and the closure of MG Rover.

Daniel Braithwaite studied Business Management at the University of Birmingham. As part of his degree programme he completed a placement year for Vauxhall Motors at their headquarters. The year inspired him to undertake further research on the automotive industry and trends in the UK economy.

Dr Chay Brooks is a Lecturer in International Entrepreneurship at the University of Sheffield. His research focuses on entrepreneurship and philanthropy as well as local and regional development in the UK and internationally.

Dr Cédric Brunelle is Assistant Professor in Urban Studies at Centre Urbanisation Culture Société (UCS) at the Institut National de la Recherche Scientifique (INRS) in Montreal. His research focuses on urban and regional development, including the industrial dynamics of peripheral and metropolitan regions, as well as economic resilience.

Dr Jennifer Clark is Associate Professor in the School of Public Policy and Director of the Center for Urban Innovation at the Georgia Institute of Technology. Her research focuses on urban and regional economic development, urban innovation, and technology and policy diffusion in the context of smart cities.

Dr Stuart Dawley is Senior Lecturer in Economic Geography in the Centre for Urban and Regional Development Studies (CURDS) at Newcastle

University. His research interests are around evolutionary approaches within economic geography, particularly in developing a broader geographical political economy approach to path creation.

Dr Paolo Di Caro is an economist at the Department of Finance, Italian Ministry of Economy and Finance, and a Research Associate at the Centre for Applied Macro-Finance, University of York (UK). He earned a PhD in Economics from the University of Catania (Italy) and his main research interests focus on regional economics, spatial econometrics and the theory and applied analysis of regional and local issues in public economics.

Dr Rachel Doern is a Senior Lecturer in Entrepreneurship at Goldsmiths University of London. Drawing on micro-sociological and psychological approaches, her research examines the cognitions, emotions and behaviours of different groups of entrepreneurs and in relation to adverse conditions.

Dr Emil Evenhuis is a Research Associate at the Department of Geography, University of Cambridge. His research focuses on long-term economic transformation in cities, drawing on evolutionary, institutional and political economy approaches within economic geography and the social sciences more widely.

Huiwen Gong is a PhD Student at the Department of Geography, Kiel University, Germany. Her research focuses on creative industries (particularly the video games industry), co-evolution of institutions and industries, as well as theories and paradigms of economic geography.

Nick Gray is a Doctoral Researcher and Research Associate at Newcastle Business School, Northumbria University. His research interests include local and regional development, subnational governance, labour markets and welfare reform.

Robert Hassink is Professor of Economic Geography at Kiel University, Germany, and Visiting Professor of at the Institute of Socio-Economic Geography and Spatial Management at the Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań, Poland. His research focuses on the restructuring of old industrial areas, regional innovation policy, as well as theories and paradigms of economic geography.

Robert Huggins is Professor of Economic Geography and Director for Economic Geography at the School of Geography and Planning, Cardiff University, UK.

Christian Kjær Monsson works with innovation policy as a Special Consultant at the Danish Ministry for Higher Education and Research.

He has a PhD in Social Science and his research focuses on regional and small business development.

Lee Pugalis is Professor of Urban Studies at the University of Technology Sydney. His research traverses local and regional economic development, urban regeneration and strategic planning, and he has a particular interest in urban entrepreneurship.

James Simmie is Emeritus Professor of Innovation Studies in the Faculty of Technology, Design and the Environment at Oxford Brookes University. His research is focused on the economic geography of innovation, evolutionary theory, and the competitiveness of urban and regional economies.

Ben Spigel is Chancellor's Fellow and Lecturer in Entrepreneurship at the University of Edinburgh Business School. His research focuses on entrepreneurial ecosystems, digital entrepreneurship and the geography of high-growth entrepreneurship.

Dr Piers Thompson is a Reader in Small Business and Local Economics at Nottingham Trent University, UK.

Alan Townsend is Emeritus Professor of Regional Regeneration and Development Studies at Durham University. His research interests include local and regional planning and economic development.

Tim Vorley is Professor of Entrepreneurship at the University of Sheffield. His research focuses on the role of place in economic resilience, as well as local and regional economic development.

Nick Williams is Associate Professor in Enterprise at the University of Leeds. His research primarily focuses on entrepreneurship and institutions, including institutional change in crisis and post-conflict economies, as well as economic resilience.