

About the authors

Marijke De Pauw is a legal and policy officer at UNIA, the Belgian Interfederal Centre for Equal Opportunities. Her work focuses on the implementation of the CRPD at the national level. Dr De Pauw holds a Master's degree in law from Vrije Universiteit Brussel (VUB) and a doctoral degree in international human rights law from the VUB and Université Saint-Louis – Bruxelles. Her doctoral thesis researched the fundamental rights of older persons from a comparative perspective at the international and regional level. She is currently also an associate postdoctoral researcher at VUB, a member of the editorial board of the Flemish human rights journal Tijdschrift voor Mensenrechten and an active member of the EU COST Action on Ageism.

Israel (Issi) Doron is an Associate Professor and the Head of the Center for Research and Study of Aging at the University of Haifa, and the Past President of the Israeli Gerontological Society. He specializes in the fields of law and ageing, social policy and ageing, ethics and ageism. Professor Doron has written extensively on topics such as law and ageing, and human rights of older persons and is the editor of key books in the field such as Theories on Law and Ageing: The Jurisprudence of Elder Law (Springer, 2009). Finally, Professor Doron is also the founder of an Israeli NGO, "The Law in the Service of the Elderly", which was involved in key strategic-litigation regarding rights of older persons in Israel.

Nena Georgantzi is a trained lawyer specializing in human rights (MA, Université de Strasbourg, France) and social protection (MA, KU Leuven, Belgium). Since 2010 Nena has been working for AGE Platform Europe (AGE), an EU network, which aims to voice and promote the rights of the 190 million citizens aged 50+ in the European Union and to raise awareness on the issues that concern them most. Nena is currently finalizing her PhD on the human rights of older persons at the National University of Ireland in Galway (NUIG). Nena has participated in the drafting of the Council of Europe recommendation on the rights of older persons and has consulted the UN Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights. She is also involved in the political process around a new UN convention on the rights of older persons.

Ayelet Gur is a lecturer at the School of Social Work at Bar Ilan University. Her interest lies at the intersection of social policy and disability, with emphasis on issues related to the social inclusion and human rights of people with disabilities in light of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. She is currently involved in two major national studies in Israel: an evaluation study on the transition of persons with intellectual and/or developmental disabilities from institutional care facilities to community-based settings, and a households study on the families of children with intellectual disabilities.

Rosie Harding is Chair in Law and Society at the Birmingham Law School, University of Birmingham, UK and Chair of the Socio-Legal Studies Association. She won a Philip Leverhulme Prize for Law in 2017, and was a 2016/17 British Academy Mid-Career Fellow. Her research focuses on the place of law in everyday life, with a particular focus on the regulation and legal recognition of intimate and caring relationships. She is author of Duties to Care: Dementia, Relationality and Law (2017, Cambridge University Press) and Regulating Sexuality (2011, Routledge Social Justice, winner of the 2011 SLSA-Hart Book Prize and the 2011 SLSA-Hart Early Career Prize), and editor of Revaluating Care in Theory, Law and Politics: Cycles and Connections (2017, Routledge Social Justice), Ageing and Sexualities: Interdisciplinary Perspectives (2016, Ashgate), and Law and Sexuality (2016, Routledge Critical Concepts).

Paul de Hert is co-director of the multidisciplinary Research Group on Law, Science, Technology & Society (LSTS) at the Vrije Universiteit Brussel (VUB). Professor Paul de Hert's work addresses problems in the area of privacy and technology, human rights and criminal law. Currently he is expanding his scope of interest including research on issues with regard to the human rights status of the elderly and the principle of neutrality in a democratic state. To satisfy his multiple curiosities de Hert teams up regularly with other authors. A human rights approach combined with a concern for theory is the common denominator of all his work.

Eugenio Mantovani works at the multidisciplinary Research Group on Law, Science, Technology & Society (LSTS) at the Vrije Universiteit Brussel (VUB). His research interests include the human rights status of older persons and health law.

Titti Mattsson is a Professor of Public Law at the Faculty of Law, Lund University, Sweden and coordinator for the Norma Elder Law Research

Environment as well as the Law and Vulnerabilities Project at the University. She is a board member of the Swedish Agency for Health and Care Services Analysis and is involved in several national and international research networks, including the COST Action on Ageism. Her current research lies primarily in the intersection between jurisprudence, ethics and social work, with focuses on social welfare policy and the regulation of healthcare services and housing for older people.

Barbara Mikołajczyk is a Professor at the Faculty of Law and Administration of the University of Silesia in Katowice, Poland and the head of the Department of International Public Law and European Law. She has been involved in the COST Action on Ageism (IS1402) and in works of the Polish Commissioner for Human Rights' Group of Experts on Older Persons. She is a member of the Odysseus Academic Network for Studies on Immigration Asylum in Europe. She was also appointed as the ad hoc judge in the European Court of Human Rights (2012–14). She has authored books and articles dedicated to human rights of various categories of vulnerable persons, as migrant workers, asylum seekers, children, ethnic minorities, sexual minorities and older persons.

Ann Numhauser-Henning is Professor of Private Law at the Faculty of Law, Lund University, Sweden and the former Pro-Vice-Chancellor of the same university. She has been the head of the Norma Research Programme since its start in 1996 and initiated the Norma Elder Law Research Environment in 2012. She has written widely on labour law, especially employment law and non-discrimination law, but also on law in the social dimension more generally.

Gerard Quinn holds a Wallenberg chair at the Wallenberg Institute (University of Lund, Sweden) and a research chair at Leeds University (UK). A graduate of Harvard Law School, he was the founding director of the Centre for Disability Law at the National University of Ireland. He has three lifetime achievement awards in the field of disability and was named a “champion of EU research” by the government of Ireland. He has worked for and led major research projects for the UN, the EU and the Council of Europe. He led the delegation of Rehabilitation International during the drafting of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and has served on the boards of many international philanthropies. One of his main interests is intersectionality and particularly between old age and disability. He is currently spearheading the development of a Leeds/Lund Open Personhood Project that brings many research institutes around the world together to reflect on personhood and old age as well as disability. He currently sits on the Council of State in Ireland that advises its President on constitutional law issues.

Paul Quinn works at the multidisciplinary Research Group on Law, Science, Technology & Society (LSTS) at the Vrije Universiteit Brussel (VUB) and has also been active in research into issues associated with stigmatization and anti-discrimination approaches. He has been particularly active in developing a normative argument concerning the threats posed by stigmatizing expressions and language when used by the state. His PhD thesis was entitled “Stigmatizing Expressions of the State and the Problems they Pose for the Law”. It was concerned with the harm that such expressions can cause and the difficulties that legal systems may have in regulating such harms.

Bridget Sleep is the Senior Rights Policy Adviser at HelpAge International. After working at Universidade Eduardo Mondlane in Mozambique for three years, Bridget completed a Master’s degree in International Human Rights at the Institute of Commonwealth Studies, University of London. Since then she has worked on human rights and development at the Panos Institute, International Family Health and now HelpAge International, where she focuses on strengthening the rights of older people through the use of human rights mechanisms.

Benny Spanier earned his PhD from the University of Haifa Law School, Haifa, Israel. He is a research associate in the Center for Research and Study of Aging at the University of Haifa. His research focuses on ageism, soft law and the rights of older persons on the International arena and he has published numerous studies and articles in this field. He was a Visiting Scholar at Syracuse University College of Law. Currently he is working with colleagues on establishing a new International Older Persons Human Rights Index (IOPHRI), which will monitor the legal rights of older persons around the world.

Joanne Watson is a Speech Pathologist employed as a lecturer and researcher in Disability and Inclusion at Deakin University in Victoria, Australia. Joanne’s current research interests are centred around the impact of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities on signatory nations’ capacity to maximize the self-determination for all citizens. She is particularly focused on the realization of self-determination for people with intellectual disability with complex communication support needs through supported decision-making mechanisms. Joanne’s publications include book chapters and peer and non-peer reviewed academic journals and publications. Joanne presents widely in the area of disability and communication disorders within Australia and internationally.