Contributors

J. Theodore Anagnoson is Professor Emeritus of Political Science at California State University Los Angeles, where he has taught since 1983. He has written more than 30 articles and book chapters, as well as several versions of a statistics text, StataQuest 4, and has recently re-written several chapters of Governing California in the 21st Century for its 3rd edition (Norton, 2011). He was Acting Director of the Health Financing Policy Division, Office of Health Policy, Office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation, US Department of Health and Human Services, Washington, DC from 1995 to 1997.

Peter Barberis is Professor of Politics at Manchester Metropolitan University, where he teaches contemporary British politics and political history. Before his academic career he worked in local government and has for many years served on the Public Administration Committee of the Joint University Council. In addition to journal articles and contributions to edited volumes his books include The Elite of the Elite: Permanent Secretaries in the British Higher Civil Service (Ashgate, 1996); and Liberal Lion – Jo Grimond: a Political Life (I B Tauris, 2004). While continuing research on the British higher civil service he is also preparing material for a volume on British foreign policy since the First World War.

Fiona Buick is undertaking a PhD in Management at the University of Canberra, Australia, exploring the role of organizational culture in the effectiveness of whole-of-government approaches. She has a Masters degree in Human Resource Management, Graduate Diploma in Employment Relations and a BA Professional Practice in Psychology.

Elio Borgonovi is Professor of Public Management at Università Bocconi, Milan, Italy. He has been a professor at the Universities of Parma and Trento. He was formerly Dean of SDA Bocconi School of Management from 1997 to 2002 and president of ASFOR, the Italian association of schools of management. In 1978 he founded the Centre for Research on Health and Social Care Management (CERGAS), of which he is President. He is the scientific director of the journals Azienda Pubblica and MECOSAN. He is author and co-author of several books and articles on the topic of public management, healthcare and non-profit organization policies, strategies, planning and control systems, accounting, business-government relations and public-private partnership.
Manueline Desbouvries completed a Masters in Public and Political Communications at Bordeaux University, France, then moved to London in 2007 where she joined the British Civil Service. She currently works in communications at the Cabinet Office.

Michael Duggett is a career British civil servant who has worked in policy-making, professional and advisory roles in three London Whitehall departments, in the European Union and in international bodies such as the International Institute of Administrative Sciences, Brussels, which he served as Director General, 2001–2007. He studied at Durham, Oxford and Swansea universities, has been a visiting professor at the University of Peking and is currently in such a role at the University of Portsmouth. He has published widely in the fields of governance and public service reform, in English and French.

O.P. Dwivedi is Professor Emeritus, Department of Political Science, University of Guelph, Canada, where he has taught since 1967. He has published 35 books and has contributed many chapters/articles in various professional journals and scholarly books. His research interests include comparative public policy and administration, public service morality, and environmental ethics. He has been consultant to the World Bank, UNESCO, WHO, UNO, UN-ESCAP, IDRC and CIDA. He is recipient of honorary degrees from Lethbridge and Waterloo Universities in Canada, as well as various international awards. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada and in 2005, in recognition of a lifetime of outstanding service to scholarship, he received the Order of Canada.

Mark Evans is Director of the Australia-New Zealand School of Government’s Institute for Governance (ANZSOG). The emphasis of his work at ANZSOG is threefold: the provision of the ACT and Commonwealth departments with strategic training and research support; the delivery of Executive MPA and short courses in designing public policies and governance and innovation; and the convenorship of the Excellence in Local Government Leadership Programme. Before taking this role Evans was Professor of Government and Director of the University of York MPA programme in the United Kingdom. He has played an international role in supporting good administrative practices in public administration in developed and developing contexts. He has delivered training and managed evaluation projects for the World Bank in Afghanistan, United Nations agencies, and the European Union, as well as government departments such as: the UK’s Cabinet Office and departments for International Development and Foreign and Commonwealth

Agustín E. Ferraro is Professor for Political Science and Public Administration at the University of Salamanca, Spain. He won the award of the Spanish National Institute for Public Administration (2008) for his research work on public bureaucracies in Latin America. He was invited by Princeton University, NJ, as a Visiting Associate Professor for the spring semester 2011. As a Humboldt Scholar (2001–2003) he worked at the Institute for Latin American Studies, Hamburg, and at the London School of Economics and Political Science.

John Halligan is Professor of Public Administration at the University of Canberra. He specializes in comparative public management and governance.

Sylvia Horton is Associate Principal Lecturer at the University of Portsmouth, United Kingdom. She has researched developments in the British Civil Service since 1974 and chronicled the transition from public administration to public management in UK public services. She has produced regular academic papers on developments in public management throughout the public sector, in both the UK and Europe, but her research has specifically focused on changes and developments in people management and the transition from traditional personnel management to HRM. Horton has authored and co-edited books and journal articles emanating from the work of the EGPA Personnel Policies Study Group of which she was joint convenor from 1992 to 2009. Her current research interests are in leadership, training and development and competency management in civil service systems. She is currently completing a book on public management in the UK.

John-Mary Kauzya is the Chief of Governance and Public Administration Branch of the Division for Public Administration and Development Management in the Department of Economic and Social Affairs at the United Nations headquarters in New York, where he has worked since July 1999. He was born in Uganda. Before taking on the management job of Chief of Branch, he worked as Inter-regional Adviser in Governance Institutions and Systems in the same branch. Prior to joining the international civil service at the United Nations he taught at Makerere University in Uganda and worked as the Deputy Director of the Uganda Management Institute and as an international Consultant in Africa in various fields of governance and public administration and management, mostly in post-conflict countries. Kauzya has provided advice for strengthening governance and public administration capacities in Uganda, Rwanda, Ethiopia, Mozambique, Angola, Somalia, South Africa, Tanzania, Liberia, Kenya, the Comoros and Kosovo, especially on civil service reform, decentralization and management of local governments, capacity building for conflict management, parliamentary restructuring, strategic planning, organizational auditing, evaluation and restructuring, corporate planning, training needs assessment, public policy design, programming and evaluation. He holds a PhD in Law (Doctorat en Droit) from the University of Paris 1 Pantheon.

Masao Kikuchi is Assistant Professor of Public Policy and Management at the Department of Public Management, School of Business Administration, Meiji University, Tokyo, Japan. Prior to his current position, he was a Research Fellow at the Institute of Administrative Management, and a Research Associate at the Research Institute of Economy, Trade and Industry. His research interests include comparative governance reform, performance measurement, budgetary management, and trust in government. He holds a PhD in Political Science from Meiji University.

Andrew Massey holds a Chair in Politics in the Department of Politics, University of Exeter, United Kingdom. He has published widely on the reform of national and global governance and governments, exploring the dynamics to change and the institutional reforms that result. He is co-chair of the EGPA Permanent Study Group on EU Administration and Multi-Level Governance with Edoardo Ongaro.

D.S. Mishra, is an officer of the Indian Administrative Service, and at present is Principal Secretary to Honourable Chief Minister, Principal Secretary, Tax and Registration and Principal Secretary-cum-Director General, Civil Aviation in State Government of Uttar Pradesh in India.
His administrative experience spans over 26 years serving India’s state and central governments. He has published several articles/research papers in Indian journals and abroad; has participated in many national/international seminars/conferences; and has delivered lectures in training institutions and universities. Mishra holds a BTech in Electrical Engineering, Post Graduate Diploma in Human Resource Management, MBA in International Business and Post Graduate Diploma in Governance, Democratization and Public Policy, and was a visiting faculty at the University of Guelph, Canada.

Akira Nakamura is a Professor at the Graduate School of Governance
Studies and School of Political Science and Economics, Meiji University, Contributors

Tokyo, Japan. From 2002 to 2008, he was the Vice President and Dean of the graduate school of the university. For four years from 2000, Nakamura was a member of the Committee of Experts of Public Administration in the United Nations. He is currently an international editor of Public Administration Review, an official publication of the American Society for Public Administration. He has also served as a board member of the international journal, Governance, and a vice president of the International Institute of Administrative Sciences. He has an extensive list of publications on various issues of public administration in both Japanese and English.

Janine O'Flynn holds a post at the Crawford School of Economics and Government, The Australian National University, Canberra. Her expertise is in public sector management, reform and policy, in particular as this relates to the changing nature of relationships.

Edoardo Ongaro is Professor of International Public Services Management at Northumbria University, Newcastle, UK. Since 2010, he has served as Chair of the Permanent Study Group on EU Administration and Multi-Level Governance of the European Group of Public Administration (EGPA). He is member of the steering committee of EGPA. Among his other memberships, he is in the scientific committee of the European Public Sector Award promoted by the European Institute of Public Administration (EIPA) and in the steering committee of the Public Sector Management Development Group of the European Foundation for Management Development (EFMD). He has published extensively on the topic of administrative reforms at the national and European level. His latest book, Public Management Reform and Modernization: Trajectories of Administrative Change in Italy, France, Greece, Portugal and Spain, is published by Edward Elgar.

Richard Parry is Reader in the Department of Social Policy, the University of Edinburgh, United Kingdom. He previously worked as a civil servant and as a researcher at the University of Strathclyde, United Kingdom. As a political scientist his work falls in the interconnected areas of public policy, public administration and public sector resource allocation, especially in Scotland and the UK. Earlier research projects included ones on public employment, central-local relations in Scotland, comparative European social policy and privatization in social policy. Since the mid-1990s he has been researching, as part of Economic and Social Research Council programmes, the role of the Treasury, the transition to the new devolved administrations in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, and the effect of devolution on the Home Civil Service.
Robert Pyper is Head of the School of Social Sciences and Professor of Government and Public Policy at the University of the West of Scotland, United Kingdom. He has published widely on aspects of British government, with a particular focus on issues of civil service policy and management, official and political accountability, and the modernization agenda in public services. He is the author or co-author of nine books, including New Public Management and Modernization in Britain (with Andrew Massey) and Britain’s Modernized Civil Service (with June Burnham). His articles have been published in a range of journals, including The British Journal of Politics and International Relations, Parliamentary Affairs, The Political Quarterly, Policy and Politics and Public Policy and Administration.

Chris Sadleir is Lecturer in Public Administration at the University of Canberra, Australia. His research is in the areas of institutional change and state adaptation as responses to greater domestic engagement with international and globalizing pressures. His current work focuses on challenges for civil servants in such environments.