Contributors

Francesc Badia is a social scientist, specializing in culture and international relations. He carried out his doctoral studies on the network society at the Open University of Catalonia, and holds a Diploma of Advanced Studies in Information and Knowledge Society. As an international consultant, he works for think-tanks and public institutions in Spain, including the Catalan government and the Spanish Ministry of Foreign Affairs. He has recently served as General Manager at the European Institute of the Mediterranean.

Alexander Evans is a Gwilym Gibbon Fellow at Nuffield College, Oxford and a serving British diplomat currently based in Pakistan. He has also worked at the British High Commission, New Delhi, and as a member of the Policy Planning Staff in London. Prior to joining the Diplomatic Service he was research director at Policy Exchange and an associate fellow at Chatham House. He spent two years as Director of Studies at a financial think-tank and has also worked for the United Nations (UN) in Afghanistan, the Stimson Center, Washington, DC, and the Centre for Defence Studies, King’s College London. He has been a regular contributor to BBC World TV and CNN, and publishes in a range of journals including Foreign Affairs.

Adam Goodman is a specialist on globalization and Middle Eastern politics. He is the author of Asymmetric Strategies in the Middle East (Advanced Research and Assessment Group, Defence Academy of the UK, September 2007).

Bruno Gruselle has worked as a military engineer for the French Ministry of Defence to which he was appointed in 1995. In this capacity he has served with the United Nations Special Commission (UNSCOM) in Iraq. In 1998, he joined the policy branch to study issues relating to weapons of mass destruction (WMD) proliferation. He was appointed to Fondation pour la Recherche Stratégique (FRS), a French think-tank, in 2005. Bruno Gruselle is now serving as a desk officer for technology assessment in the Ministry of Interior policy branch.

Adrian Guelke is Professor of Comparative Politics in the School of Politics, International Studies and Philosophy at Queen’s University,

George Joffé is at the Centre of International Studies at the University of Cambridge where he lectures in the postgraduate studies programme. He also holds a visiting fellowship at the Centre of Islamic Studies at Oxford University and a professorial fellowship at the Global Policy Institute at London Metropolitan University. Previously he was Deputy Director of the Royal Institute of International Affairs. He is also the founder and co-editor of the Journal of North African Studies. He specializes in the international relations and current affairs of North Africa and the Middle East.

David Martin Jones is Senior Lecturer in Political Science at the University of Queensland. He has taught at the University of Tasmania and the National University of Singapore. His books include the edited work Globalisation and the New Terror: The Asia Pacific Dimension (London: Edward Elgar, 2006) and ASEAN and East Asian International Relations (London: Edward Elgar, 2006) with Mike Smith. He has written several articles on Islamism and Southeast Asia for, inter alia, Jane’s Defence Weekly, World Today, Studies in Conflict and Terrorism and National Interest.

Ann Lane is Reader in the Defence Studies Department at the Joint Services Command and Staff College, UK Defence Academy. She was formerly Lecturer in Politics at Queen’s University, Belfast. Her most recent publications include Yugoslavia: When Ideas Collide (Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2004) and ‘Modernising the management of British diplomacy’, in Cambridge Review of International Affairs, 20 (1) (2007), 179–93.

Amit Modi is a graduate student at Harvard University’s Department of Government.

Andrew Phillips is a lecturer in international relations at the Department of Political Science and International Studies at the University of Queensland. His research interests focus broadly on the evolution of the global state system from 1500 to the present, and concentrate specifically on the challenge that ‘new’ security threats such as religiously motivated terrorism, the spread of Weapons of Mass Destruction and state failure pose to the contemporary global state system. His published works include a co-authored article on the relationship between nationalism, tribalism and Islam in post-Soviet Central Asia, as well as an article contrasting the dynamics of transnational religious military mobilization in Reformation Europe and the contemporary Middle East (Review of International Studies, forthcoming). Prior to his postgraduate studies, Andrew worked as a policy adviser in the Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet.

Paul Schulte is Senior Visiting Fellow in the Advanced Research and Assessment Group of the UK Defence Academy and in the Centre for the Study of Global Governance at the London School of Economics. His most recent publications are ‘Universal vision or bounded rationality?’, International Affairs, 83 (3) (2007), 501–10 and ‘Just wars of the future?’, RUSI Journal, 153 (4) (August 2008), 18–27.

Jessica Stern is Lecturer in Public Policy at the Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University. She is the author of Terror in the Name of God: Why Religious Militants Kill (New York: HarperCollins 2004) and The Ultimate Terrorists (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1999). She served on President Clinton’s National Security Council Staff in 1994–95 and advises a number of government agencies on issues related to terrorism.

Steve Tatham is Senior Research Fellow and Director of Media, Communications and Political Inclusion Research, Advanced Research and Assessment Group, UK Defence Academy, Shrivenham. He is the author of Losing Arab Hearts and Minds: The Coalition, Al-Jazeera and Muslim Public Opinion (London: Hurst, 2006).
