Contributors

Ibrahim Abraham is a doctoral student at a late stage of completion of his studies in the United Kingdom.

Syed Othman Alhabshi, PhD is professor and the academic head of the INCEIF, the global university for Islamic finance. He is a key scholar in the takaful field, and is currently the chief academic officer of INCEIF.

Syed Hamid Aljunid, PhD is a professor at INCEIF, a global accreditation university for studies leading to a chartered qualification to practice Islamic finance. His research is in the area of professional accreditation/training in Islamic finance.

Mohamed Ariff, PhD, CMA is a professor of finance at the Bond University in Australia, and holds an endowed chair as a visitor at the GSM of University Putra Malaysia. He is one of three researchers in receipt of an Australian government grant for Islamic banking research. His current research is on extending theoretical and technical financial details to the emerging field of Islamic finance.

Mohammad K. Badar, PhD is an assistant professor in the very old Alquds University in Jerusalem.

Ishaq Bhatti, PhD is an associate professor of finance at the Latrobe University, Australia: he also holds a professorship in UAE University. Prof. Bhatti is instrumental in establishing Islamic banking training at postgraduate level at his university. He is also involved in the industry.

Maria Bhatti is a postgraduate student at the Law School, University of Melbourne, Australia. She specialises in comparative legal systems, and is doing research on Islamic finance as well.

Eric Girard is a co-author of the chapter by Kabir Hassan.

Kabir Hassan, PhD is a professor at the University of New Orleans, USA. He is a mainstream researcher in banking and finance, and holds an endowed chair in his university. His publications in top-rated journals are well-cited in banking literature: he also specializes in Islamic finance studies. He is the editor of a new journal on Islamic finance.
Taufiq Hassan, PhD is an associate professor at the University Putra Malaysia. One of his research interests is in applied research in Islamic banking and sukuk bonds.

Munawar Iqbal, PhD is a professor at the International Islamic University, Islamabad, Pakistan: as the dean of the faculty of Islamic economics and finance, he was instrumental in the educational advancement of the people within the industry. Prior to that, he had significant research appointments at the Islamic Development Bank. He is an accomplished scholar in Islamic finance, having had decades of research and teaching developments in this field.

Mervyn K. Lewis, PhD, FASSA is a professor of banking and finance at the University of South Australia. He is an eminent researcher with notable publications on Islamic ethics and on banking in general. He has published books and articles on Islamic ethics. He is also the series editor of Islamic finance books for Edward Elgar Publishing.

Constant Mews, PhD is a professor of religious studies, and is director of the Centre for the Study of Religions at the Monash University, Australia. He is one of the award holders with two others of the Australian Research Council grant used in this project to work towards this book.

Abdullah Saeed, PhD is the endowed (Sultan Qaboos) chair, professor and director of the Centre for Excellence in Islamic Studies at the University of Melbourne, Australia. His writings on Islamic studies are well-known. He holds concurrently the directorship of the Centre as well as the Asia Institute.

Shaikh Hamzah Razak is a member of the teaching staff at INCEIF, Malaysia. He specializes in takaful studies.

Shamsher M., PhD is a professor of finance at the University Putra Malaysia while holding the deputy dean position at his university’s Graduate School of Management. He is a well-published Asian scholar with a specialization on emerging capital market behaviour, especially of Malaysia.

Michael T. Skully is a professor of banking at the Monash University, Australia. He is a well-known educator in banking and his books on the subject are widely used. As a specialist in banking studies, his recent works on Islamic banking are becoming a good contribution to the field.

Adrian Walsh, PhD is an associate professor at the University of New England in Australia. His contribution to the book is in tracing the intellectual source to Bentham’s work for the break in the historical tradition of opposition to usury in Western religious literature.

Raquib Zaman, PhD is a professor of finance at the prestigious Ithaca College, USA. He is a noted scholar in finance, and has contributed a very carefully researched scholarly paper on Islamic banking. His views are based on interpretations of principles in Islamic jurisprudence over historical times, which is in contrast to narrower interpretations that have come about over some 90 years. His carefully researched views in his writings bring a fresh perspective on the issue of usury.