Susan L. Averett is the Charles A. Dana Professor of Economics at Lafayette College in Easton, PA, USA. She has written dozens of academic articles and book chapters on a wide array of topics in labor and health economics. Her current research includes adolescent risky behavior, the effect of marriage on health, and the causes and consequences of obesity. She is the co-editor of the Eastern Economic Journal and serves on the board of the Committee on the Status of Women in the Economics Profession.

David J. Berri is Professor of Economics at Southern Utah University in Cedar City, UT, USA. He has published extensively on consumer demand, competitive balance, and worker productivity in professional sports. His work has been featured prominently in the popular press. He is a past president of the North American Association of Sports Economists and a member of the editorial board of the Journal of Sports Economics and the International Journal of Sport Finance.

Ross Booth is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Economics at Clayton campus of Monash University in Melbourne, Victoria, Australia. He received a Dean’s Teaching Award in 2005. His research has focused on the economics of professional sports leagues, especially the Australian Football League. Since 1988, he has been a commentator for the Victorian Football League on ABC TV. He is a life member of the Victorian Amateur Football Association (VAFA) and was a Board member from 1986 to 2010.

Robert W. Brown is Professor of Economics at California State University San Marcos, CA, USA. He has published papers on such topics as estimating the marginal value of college athletes, NCAA academic policies, discrimination in sports, and revenue sharing in college football. His other research interests are regional land use, environmental recreation, and housing economics.

XiaoGang Che is a Post-doctoral Fellow in the Department of Economics at the University of Alberta, Edmonton, Canada. He earned his PhD from the University of Sydney, Australia, in 2012. His research interests include applied game theory and sports economics.

Dennis Coates is Professor of Economics at the University of Maryland – Baltimore County in Baltimore, MD, USA. His published work has analyzed topics ranging from the voting behavior of legislators to the economic effects of stadiums and professional sports franchises. He is a past president of the North American Association of Sports Economists and the Book Review Editor for the Journal of Sports Economics.

Joshua Congdon-Hohman is Assistant Professor of Economics at the College of the Holy Cross in Worcester, MA, USA. His research is primarily in the fields of labor and public economics, and he has a strong interest in topics involving sports economics.

Sarah M. Estelle is Assistant Professor of Economics at Hope College in Holland, MI, USA. Her research interests span labor, public, and health economics and include the economics of education, families and parenting, and adolescent risky behavior. Her research examines the influence of parents and the home environment on early elementary academic outcomes, the effectiveness of parental communication about sex on adolescent sexual activity, and the returns to for-profit collegiate attainment.

B. Erin Fairweather is an economics lecturer in the New York metropolitan area. She has taught at several universities, including Rutgers, Temple, and CUNY. Her research interests include experimental economics, the unintended consequences of public policies, and the impact of race and gender on educational and professional achievements. She has spent over seven years providing consulting services in high-profile litigation matters with top firms such as Duff & Phelps in New York City.

Bernd Frick is Professor of Organizational and Media Economics and a Vice President at the University of Paderborn, Germany. He is also Director of the Institute of Labor and Personnel Economics at Mobile Life Campus of Volkswagen AG in Wolfsburg and Research Associate at the Institute for Labour Law and Industrial Relations in the European Community at the University of Trier. His research interests are in organizational and personnel economics, industrial relations, and sports economics.

Keith F. Gilsdorf is Associate Professor of Economics at Augsburg College in Minneapolis, MN, USA. Previously, he spent several years as a regulatory economist for the State of Minnesota, analyzing regulatory policy in the natural gas and electric utility industries. His research interests are in compensation systems and sports labor markets, public utility regulation, and the determinants of market structure. He has published articles on the utility industry and on tournament incentives in men’s and women’s tennis.

Brad R. Humphreys is Professor in the Department of Economics at the University of Alberta, Edmonton, Canada, where he holds the Chair in the Economics of Gaming. His research on the economic impact of professional sports, the economics of gambling, and the financing of the Olympic Games has been published in numerous scholarly journals. He is a past president of the North American Association of Sports Economists and is currently editor of Contemporary Economic Policy and associate editor of the International Journal of Sport Finance.

R. Todd Jewell is Professor of Economics and department chair at the University of North Texas in Denton, TX, USA. He has published extensively in the economics of sports, with a recent focus on aggressive play in professional sports. He has also published in the areas of the economics of immigration and health economics.

Joon-Ho Kang is Professor of Sport Marketing and Director of the Center for Sport Industry at Seoul National University in Seoul, Republic of Korea. His research interests include sport sponsorship, sport consumer behavior, sport industry, and sport development. He has been an editorial board member of the Journal of Sport Management, the International Journal of Sport Finance, and the International Journal of Sport and Health Science.

Anthony C. Krautmann is Professor of Economics at DePaul University in Chicago, IL, USA. He has published many papers on topics ranging from wage determination of professional athletes, to competitive balance in sports leagues, to the potential disincentives associated with long-term labor contracts. He is a past president of the North American Association of Sports Economists.

Young Hoon Lee is Professor of Economics at Sogang University in Seoul, Republic of Korea. He has published widely on team efficiency measurement, temporal variations in competitive balance, and the uncertainty of outcome hypothesis. He has been a member of the editorial board of the Journal of Sports Economics and the International Journal of Sport Finance.

Younghan Lee is Assistant Professor of Sport Management in the Isenberg School of Management at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst, MA, USA. His research centers on the practical implementation of marketing theory and business strategy in sport. It includes strategic sport marketing, customer relationship marketing and management, management efficiency, and ticket pricing strategy.

Eva Marikova Leeds is Professor of Economics at Moravian College in Bethlehem, PA, USA. She has written on privatization and mortgage markets in transition economies. Her work in sports economics includes... the application of event analysis to stadium naming rights and finding determinants of national success in sports.

Michael A. Leeds is Professor of Economics and Director of Graduate Studies in Economics at Temple University in Philadelphia, PA, USA. His recent research includes work on the economics of baseball in Japan and gender differences in the response to economic contests. He is co-author with Peter von Allmen of the textbook The Economics of Sports and is President-elect of the North American Association of Sports Economists.

Rachel Levy is a client account manager for Bessemer Trust in Washington, DC, USA. She played on the varsity basketball team at Kenyon College and was a captain for two years. Her senior thesis explored the economics of women’s intercollegiate basketball.

Victor A. Mattheson is Associate Professor of Economics at the College of the Holy Cross in Worcester, MA, USA. He has published extensively on the economics of collegiate and professional sports, including the impact of sports stadia and events on the local economy. He has also worked as a top-level soccer referee, officiating national team and professional women’s matches as well as over 150 Division I intercollegiate women’s games.

Sarah S. Montgomery is Professor Emerita of Economics at Mount Holyoke College in South Hadley, MA, USA. She has a longstanding interest in the economics of the arts.

Ilhyeok Park is Associate Professor of Physical Education at Seoul National University in Seoul, Republic of Korea. His research focuses on measurement theory, applied statistics, as well as the analysis of exercise, health, and sports data. He is a member of the editorial board of several journals, including Measurement in Physical Education and Exercise Science and the Journal of Sport Management.

Michael D. Robinson is Professor of Economics at Mount Holyoke College in South Hadley, MA, USA. He has published on topics in labor economics, including gender and racial earnings differentials. He has recently worked with Professor Sarah Montgomery on several papers on the economics of the arts and on the attendance patterns at arts and sports events.

Ryan M. Rodenberg is Assistant Professor of Sport Management in the College of Education at Florida State University in Tallahassee, FL, USA. Previously, he was associate general counsel at Octagon, Washington, DC. His research interests include sports law analytics and forensic sports law.
Friedrich Scheel is a PhD student at the University of Paderborn in Paderborn, Germany, where he works as a research assistant with Professor Bernd Frick. An active sportsman and current national university champion in squash, he studies gender differences in competitive sports settings.

Stephen Shmanske is Professor Emeritus of Economics at California State University, East Bay in Hayward, CA, USA. He is the Director of the Smith Center for Private Enterprise Studies at the same campus. He has written extensively on sports economics, especially the economics of golf.

Judith Stull is Associate Professor of Sociology at LaSalle University in Philadelphia, PA, USA. She is also a Senior Research Associate at Temple University in the Institute for Schools and Society. Her research has focused on improving the educational achievement of at-risk students and the use of educational technology.

Vasant A. Sukhatme is Edward J. Noble Professor of Economics at Macalester College in St. Paul, MN, USA. He has received the Excellence in Teaching Award and the Thomas Jefferson Award for lifetime teaching, research, and service contributions to Macalester College. His research includes work on agricultural markets in India and tournament incentives in men’s and women’s tennis.

Jaret Treber is Associate Professor of Economics at Kenyon College in Gambier, OH, USA. He has published in economic history on topics in healthcare and housing construction. His more recent work has focused on occupational regulation and the economics of sports.

Peter von Allmen is Professor of Economics at Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs, NY, USA. His research has focused on compensation mechanisms, incentives, and monopsony power in professional sports. He has also published in the area of family labor supply and post-secondary pedagogy. He is co-author with Michael Leeds of the textbook The Economics of Sports and serves on the editorial board of the Eastern Economic Journal. 